to July 8 & 8/25- 10/7	Halsey Art Gallery, exhibits always create conversation. Hours: Monday – Saturday, 11am – 4pm; until 7pm on Thursdays. 161 Calhoun St., 843.953.4422. http://halsey.cofc.edu to July 8: Over the past several decades, Tom Stanley has utilized sgraffito as a significant component of his abstract paintings. Popular in the Italian Renaissance of the 15th and 16th centuries, sgraffito refers to the practice of scratching a layer of paint to reveal a contrasting layer beneath it. Also, 8/25-10/7: The paintings of Marc Trujillo portray quotidian scenes: fast food restaurants, big box store aisles, the long terminal corridors of airports, and so on. The scenes are remarkably unremarkable. In their ubiquitous nature, the paintings present an anti-place: scenes that refer not to a specific place, but to uncannily similar tableaux that unfold everyday in communities across America. Plus, Riccarda de Eccher’s sublime watercolors of mountain peaks offers a similar exploration of familiar images. In this case, her works evoke picturesque representations of snow-capped mountains from the Italian Alps. de Eccher’s watercolors offer a subversion of our current age in which the internet images are meant to be vastly and readily shared, especially those that are hi-resolution and digitally retouched.

5/12 to 9/24	Gibbes Museum of Art. Hours: closed Monday, Tues. & Thurs.: 10-6; Wed., 10-8; Fri. & Sat, 10-5; Sun. 1-5. Founded in 1905. (843) 722-2706, 135 Meeting St, Charleston, SC 29401. http://www.gibbesmuseum.org/ Special exhibits: “Artist, Scientist, Explorer: Mark Catesby in the Carolinas.” In 1722, Catesby arrived in Charleston and traveled throughout South Carolina and beyond documenting birds, reptiles and amphibians, fish, insects, and mammals indigenous to the American colonies. This four year sojourn resulted in a series of watercolors that documented the natural habitats of the Carolinas, Florida, and the Bahamas, and ultimately resulted in the first major work on the botanical and animal life of North America, The Natural History of Carolina, Florida and the Bahama Islands.
